GLOBAL MOBILITY EXECUTIVE

GME LEADERS EXCHANGE · SAN FRANCISCO · OCTOBER 22, 2026

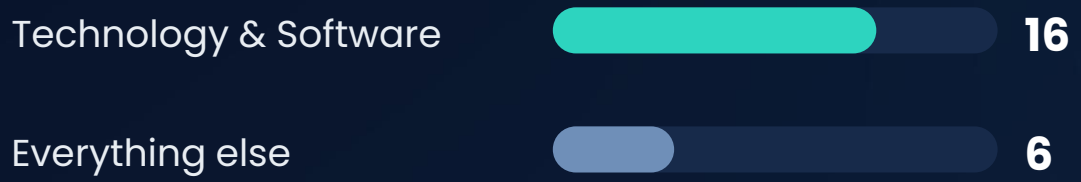

The Room and the Market.

Before anyone spoke, the 22 leaders in the room told us how their programs really run. Here is what they said, next to the wider market.

POWERED BY CBIQ

22 leaders. 20 organizations. The most tech-concentrated room we have measured.

WHO WAS IN THE ROOM

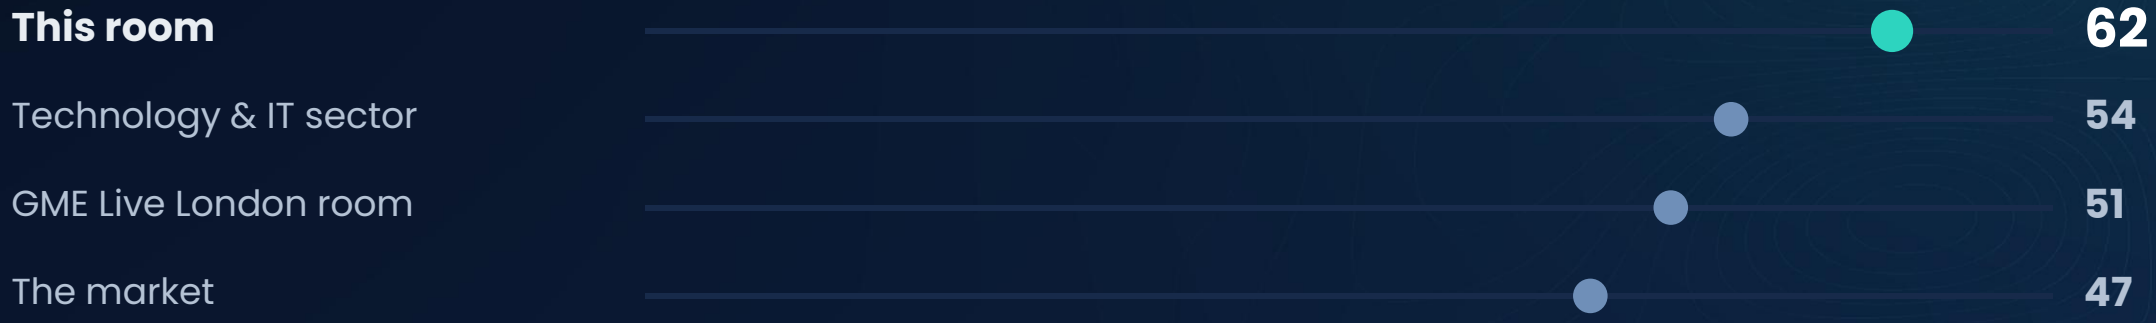

64% work for organizations under 10,000 employees

73% run a fully centralized Global Mobility function

Every delegate contributes a verified program profile at registration; everything here is aggregated, and no organization is identified.

This room scores 62. The market scores 47.

MOBILITY MATURITY INDEX

CBIQ Mobility Maturity Index, 0 to 100, scored from strategy, alignment, future readiness, and tech & AI adoption. Market base 759. Plotted on a 0 to 70 track; no score here exceeds 62.

The twist: this room earns the highest score we have measured this year with the thinnest tooling. The index measures posture, not purchases, and the next two slides show how.

Big-company AI on small-company tooling.

> Tooling: exactly normal for their size. AI adoption: nearly double it.

Until now, AI in production has tracked platform ownership. This is the first room where it does not: these programs are building AI straight onto manual foundations, and a third still run on spreadsheets.

CBIQ 2026 pool, organizations under 10,000 employees, bases 112 and 100; full market comparators: AI in production 21% (801), platform 30% (750).

In this room, Mobility reports to talent. In the market, it almost never does.

Leadership expects enhanced employee experience

The experience mandate is not a tech-sector trait either: tech-sector leadership asks for it at 23%. This room runs Global Mobility as a talent capability with a growth mandate, not a cost center.

The market’s number one pressure barely registers here.

COST MANAGEMENT AS A TOP PRESSURE

THE ROOM

THE MARKET

43%

CBIQ 2026 pool, base 775

Immigration tops this room’s pressure list at 64%, which is what technology looks like now. The quiet on cost is not sector-normal; it is this room’s own choice, and their leadership agrees: cost control expectations sit exactly at market level.

The employee ask is communication, personalization, speed.

The market's chart-topping employee ask, flexibility, runs cold here. Employees of these companies want mobility to behave like the products their employers build: responsive, personalized, fast.

Tech sector base 89; market base 722.

THE ROOM AND THE MARKET

Every figure, aggregated. No organization identified.

91% expect Global Mobility's scope and complexity to grow in the next 12 months

A third of the room still runs Global Mobility on spreadsheets
